This spring, Robert Shandrick, DMD, FAGD, a Conyngham Valley dentist completed several days of training in the field of endodontics (root canal therapy), at the world renown post-graduate training center, the Las Vegas Institute for Advanced Dental Studies, in Nevada (LVI). Over 50 dentists from across America and Canada were enrolled with Shandrick, to enrich their knowledge and improve treatment skills.

The curriculum of study, "LVI Endo Root Camp", was conducted by Director of Endodontics at LV I, Dr. Arthur "Kit" Weathers, author, international lecturer, instrument and product developer in the field of endodontics, and the LVI endodontic faculty. Training comprised several days of lecture and hands-on training in treatment techniques, diagnosis, digital imaging and the most up-to-date concepts in dental root canal care.

Today, individuals are living longer and desire to preserve their own teeth. Teeth have living components inside and for a number of causes, may become sensitized, inflamed or infected. An infected tooth may not always hurt, but will never heal on its own, and as it worsens, pain and swelling usually follows. Years ago, your only option was tooth removal. But today in a majority of cases, the pain, swelling, and infected part of the tooth can be treated in a single, pain-free visit, and the tooth saved with endodontic (root canal) care.

For more information on endodontic (root canal) care, you can contact Shandrick Dental Care Studios, Rt 93, Sugarloaf, PA (570)788-1870, or LVI (888)584-3237, or visit the Websites, www.shandrickdentalcare.com or www.LVIdocs.com.
